

Half of the UNI reward tokens should go to a set of selected invaluable pools where people can mine more UNI as a reward for providing liquidity.

The other half gets pooled with a few new pools together with a matched amount of another token. The initial liquidity supply should be locked so there is always plenty of liquidity and no rug pull.

Pair UNI with the more decent projects and I think uni will quickly gain traction as the go to token for liquidity.

This puts also less tokens in circulation, good for the price. People are getting instant fast small slippage transactions with uni which increases exposure and adoption.