

Random, but with the just released data they announced their intention to cool it for a while since we've had many changes lately. So we'll probably have at least a good number of months with the v43 dataset before more changes...unless they think of a good reason to do otherwise (or especially if they discover some issue with the latest data). That's about as sure as we can be.