

I don't think you'll get a good response here, the dominant majority uses Python with some using R too.

But if you are determined, GitHub - PyO3/pyo3: Rust bindings for the Python interpreter might be worth looking into. No guarantees that it will work out the way you expect though.

Also, note that compute-lite is currently not well supported. See Discord