

Hello,

As you know, Coinbase has become the first exchange to go public. The process has been slow but obviously benefits the entire ecosystem. I think that one of its successes has been to convince the authorities that this system can be reliable, transparent and open to all types of investors. I say this, because many questioned that the people who handle ourselves in this system do it to avoid paying taxes, etc.

The issue of legal certainty, fiscal transparency, from my point of view, in the long term, is a crucial issue that will make a difference.

In my opinion, this is a theme that should be implemented in our project. From the user's point of view, it is about being able to get reports with the movements that we have made in a given period of time. From here, each region, country, has tax obligations, etc., but it is logical that the user can extract their movement history.

What do you think?
