

From multiple sources that I've read, the data availability problem is when a malicious node publishes a block with an invalid body and therefore node can not verify if a block is valid or not. I'm a bit confused because why would a node accept blocks with invalid bodies in the first place?