

Hey, so, I read the duplex announcement, and as far as I can tell it's just 'we attach two asset classes together to up yield but with much higher counterparty risk'. A few questions: what is this doing on secret, besides 'it's a high yield asset class with bridges'? Is keytango using the enclaves to manage automatic liquidation upon asset depreciation?

In short, why should we care about this, who's working on it, etc.