

Sorry if this has been asked already. Will it be possible to set up more than one node with the same stake to avoid being penalized in case your main one goes down? I imagine the setup would involve something like a trivial load balancer and then continuously copying the current state from main -> backup node as it runs. Then if the main one disappears the load balancer points to the backup.