

There is one major difference between NMR and most other coins.

NMR generates good old dollars through the hedge fund.

NMR generates value in a tradition real world business (if a hedge fund is a real business

)

As long as the fund is successfull, there will be incentives to keep NMR alive at least with a stable exchange rate or better.

Other coins don't generate value in other real world businesses. I guess most will disappear with time, because they don't generate value. They are kept alive by the crypto mania.

And it takes time for others to realize a real world use case for NMR, simply because most tokens don't have any.
