

I have an address I did some transactions on over a year ago and I can't find the seed phrase for it, or maybe its one of the seeds I wrote down with terrible handwriting, or maybe I'm trying it with the wrong wallet or with the wrong trezor password. My memory and record keeping is awful.

Is there a way to check its airdrop eligibility without connecting the wallet, just with the address?

If I can prove its my wallet (I can login to an exchange and show I initially funded it and have access to the other wallets it sent/received from), is there any chance I could claim that airdrop and have it sent to a different address?

Does anyone know of a tool for taking a 12 or 24 word phrase and changing one word at a time to similar words for idiots like me who can't read their own handwriting? I've agonized over the bip word list trying to figure out which is wrong but nothing I try works.

Thanks.
