

builder-initiated splitting will be difficult to execute if the PTC is sufficiently large.

I know that this is only a high level description, but out of ignorance/curiosity is a minimum PTC size going to be enforced in the spec to prevent builder initiated splitting? or is it not critical enough to address?