

Share your links here

.

“Those who think to win the world by doing something to it, I see them come to grief. For the world is a sacred object. Nothing is to be done to it. To do anything to it is to damage it. To seize it is to lose it.” – Lao Tzu

[article, 1949] Why socialism?

[story, 1973] The ones who walk away from Omelas

[article, 2002] Selective moral disengagement in the exercise of moral agency

[article, 2014] The labor of the inhuman

[article, 2015] Indifferent by nature

[article, 2023] Make ethereum cypherpunk again