

Cobie recently posted a thought-provoking article about the issues with DAOs and the potential for abuse by board members wrt the upcoming staking implementation which could coincide with an unlock period for a large portion of the ApeCoin supply

In an effort to prevent dumping from this/these investors and board members, would it be beneficial or possible to extend these lock-up periods? Is this a good idea, or an atrocious one?

I think the goal of ApeCoin, since it is based on becoming the de-facto currency for Web3, should be significantly longer term, and staking itself should not be used as a smokescreen to keep retail in while letting insiders dump.

Would love feedback on this concept

- crumble.eth/totty.eth