

Can we create a repository of discussion notes / recordings that people can reference and comment on even if they were not part of the discussion live (many people are double booked or are in a time zone that makes live attendance difficult)? For example, today's community discussion with the Board.

Ray Dalio from Bridgewater has a policy where every meeting is recorded so that people can always have a repository to refer to. This has been one of the aspects of Bridgewater company culture that has made it extremely effective. This will be even more useful in a DAO setting, where members are globally distributed and are able to come in at different times.
