

This topic aims to provide an initial discussion to modify the unbonding period to the more standard 14-day unbonding. Currently it takes 30 days to unbond a stake or wait for a redelegation. This, in my opinion hinders the adoption of staking DYDX and unnecessarily punishes anyone that decides to stake DYDX since you won't receive any trading rewards in that 30-day period.

The goal of the unbonding period is to protect the chain against malicious validators by locking up their stake. With a 4.6% bonding rate the most urgent item should be to increase the bonding percentage and having a 14-day unbond time would partially help with that (further incentive migration from v3 will also help, but that is already scheduled).

I would love to hear any opinions on why we should keep the 30-day unbonding period that is currently set on chain and other arguments to move to 14-day period.