

With fees so high and no reliable time period know I suggest we start a vote on further expansion to alternative chains. The Binance Smart Chain is already up, running and others are best us there. I have been playing around with it lately and it is definitely heating up. No one wants large fees and most people just plain can not afford them The Binance Smart Chain is an established reliable growing chain. If we don't think or discuss moving there someone else will. I think we should be discussing options for the short term future. Let's be honest no one knows how long these fees are going to last, most likely, longer than shorter. I would like to hear everyones thoughts and opinions...?