

One thing I worry about on the Tournament side is that the training data we have goes back something like 20 years or so. This was a period of historically low and stable interest rates. Now that this period is ending and interest rates are moving back to their historical norm it's not obvious that the training data we have will be representative of this new regime. It's possible we'll see lower performance for some time.