

I was think about the same thing. It would make sense to have all past eras before current round for train/validation. What's the reason not to expand train/validation data each round?

This would allow to make better regime change models and perform rolling (aka sliding) cross-validation and model training.