

Maybe you could try k-means clustering on the columns. It would be interesting to see how these features group together.