

I was wondering if it will take a DAO vote to tap into the insurance fund. I was reading the RockLogic Post Mortem Post Mortem: Lido on Ethereum RockLogic GmbH Slashing Incident and it said:

Regarding possible compensation of stakers, RockLogic will determine if they will compensate stakers or propose that the Lido DAO utilise its cover fund (note: the amount analysed above is a projection and the actual penalties+missed rewards may differ).

Is this the current policy or is some smart contract somewhere that will automatically kick in if there is a large enough slashing event?
