

I've seen a significant amount of confusion in the Aave discord, governance forum, and other channels regarding Aave's Ampl market. Because this market acts in a notably different way from other markets, I'm seeing a number of folks jumping in, without really understanding how the market works. This leads to poor user experience as users receive unpleasant surprises upon realizing that the high APYs associated with this market come with various risks that are not made clear to participants. If you don't believe me about this, read through the various long threads on this forum regarding the AMPL market; there are countless examples of unhappy users who were not given adequate information about the nature of this market. Information about this market is difficult to find, with little indication on the Aave frontend that this market acts differently.

To help inform market participants and improve user experience, I've created a FAQ regarding the aAMPL market. This should help address some of the most frequent questions I've seen asked, and explain how this market behaves.

I'd like this FAQ to be easy to find, and for that reason I propose a link to this FAQ be included on the Aave frontend for the AMPL market, however I am unsure what the process is to do this, I would appreciate any help in doing this. I am absolutely open to feedback and suggestions on how this FAQ could be improved!
