

Your predictions are still uniformly rank normalized for TC – never the raw values – so any adjustments you make come down to reshuffling the order of your predictions. Ensembling predictions that get uncorrelated TC may be the way to go, but it is hard to get a handle on empirically when we can't test directly and have limited data to make guesses.