

A lot of the time we see these high-ranking models and they are actually created by people who are staking (sometimes significantly) on OTHER models and the high-ranking one is a test or experimental or high-risk model. High-risk models will often rocket to the top and be there for a while. But then something changes and they plummet. (That's how it goes with high-risk models pretty much by definition.) And this is the case with the current 3rd & 4th models (quantaquetzalcoatlus & sapphirescipionyx) which are from the same user – they are staking, just not on those models.