

I think they are using the actual staked amounts for each round (along with mmc if it is turned on), so you'd probably have to look at an account with a more significant stake to make sense of it (or pull that data from api). But then I think you just look at what their projected payouts were today relative to yesterday, or maybe it is just the single day return? (That would make more sense probably.) Now I'm gonna have to go do the math...