

Not sure if this is the right place to ask, but just curious why the Liquidation Threshold for MATIC is so low (58%) compared to other assets like WBTC/ETH (78%)? Obviously it limits borrowing power, but also increased risk of liquidation. Is Polygon considered a riskier asset than other assets with higher thresholds? Just a newb curious to learn the thought process on how these are determined.