

One proposal idea I've been thinking about lately is setting up some kind of Beta Test Group to give DAO-approved projects a user base to utilize for front-end testing. This could be when projects release their Beta version or even before to provide feedback. If this is a group you would like to be a part of, please comment below!

What motivated me was seeing projects struggle to get people to test their site and provide feedback. Sometimes, they aren't sure who to reach out to to ask for feedback or who is willing to help test. The goal of this would be to provide a way for these projects to easily find Beta testers.

- Step 1 could be to gather and manage a list of people interested in being a Beta tester. Please comment below if this is you!
- Step 2 could be to incorporate some kind of reward system for people who provide feedback the project incorporates into their app/site/etc.

This would be similar to AIP-155 but slightly different. Whereas AIP-155 would focus on the technical and security bugs, the Beta Testing Group would focus on UI/UX feedback and enhancement/feature requests.

@zheerwagen this is the idea we discussed a few days ago. I realize AIP-155 is already in the Draft phase so it might make sense to have this idea be a separate item considering it is a different type of testing than what AIP-155 would focus on. Hopefully we can develop this one together (with others as well) as well.