

I tried the XGBoost feature interaction constraint and notice no discernable difference between using it and not using it. I have since abandoned the project. I do believe that the next frontier in model development will include some type of feature restriction, but so far, the frontier lies ahead...