

GM,

With the new voting cadence being set for two-weeks, the DAO celebrating it's 2-year anniversary, and AIPs now crossing the 400 mark, I pose this question/poll to the community:

Have you ever been DM'd to change or specifically vote in a specific way for an AIP?

Whether it be from an AIP author or someone else, has anyone ever reached out to persuade you to change your vote or to vote in a specific manner regarding an AIP? I raise this question not out of malice or to alarm the community, but rather to gain insight into whether this type of behavior is indicative of trying to encourage participation in voting (whether it be an author or someone reaching out to you who may be a delegate or someone with a sizeable voting power), a byproduct of fully-transparent voting period, or something else.

I think that by addressing this question, we can better learn why this happens and hopefully improve aspects of our voting.

What do you think?
