

Hey Fam!

We're excited to see so many new faces here on Discourse and loving all of the enthusiasm.

One thing that I wanted to highlight for helping our newcomers assimilate quicker was to bring up the importance of having a profile picture (PFP)... No these don't need to be pictures of Bored Apes, or a Node Monkey, or any other fancy variation of a cool-looking primate (although we love those too

), I'm just suggesting that you make yourselves stand out from the crowd by showing us a little more about you. Whether it's a photo of yourself, something you created, or even just an image that resonates with you, adding a profile picture can go a long way in building trust within the Web3 space. It also shows that you're engaged and understand the value of online identity, which will resonate with most of us in here who are ready to cheer your trajectory on at ApeCoin DAO every step of the way.

It also adds a human touch, where in a world with increasing automation, profile pictures also distinguish genuine users from potential bots or people signing up just to farm reward programs. BTW, nothing wrong with being a robot — Terminator 2 was one of my favorite movies. There's also absolutely nothing wrong with participating in all of the awesome reward programs helping to grow our DAO in big and meaningful ways, but if you are a human and here for a little more than just that, why not put up an avatar and stay for a while! No pressure, just personalization...

The Governance Working Group is also in the process of rolling out some new weekly content concepts that will involve recognizing our top contributors in Discourse, as this really is all about YOU.

And on that note, no sweat this time around as @Davinic has been absolutely crushing it around here lately, but starting next week we'll transition to highlighting users with PFPs only. And again, I can't stress this part enough — these can be literally anything; all we'd love to see is some thought put into them so we know you're human.

Now, let's celebrate with this week's top contributors and welcome the newest member of the GWG @shotgun.tobi!!! And don't forget to follow us on Twitter!!
