

Richard said in one interview that they increased the metamodels exposure to more volatility right before the big drawdown. It would have fell either way, but the higher volatility certainly didn't help.