

How do Nomi, Ralph, and Cyrus differ in terms of construction? Is there a risk that Cyrus has been 'overly tweaked' to work well on historical data, but may not generalize as well on future data compared to Nomi and Ralph?