

It would be excellent to lead markets for emerging tokens that have strong communities behind them. DEGEN is one of them; from Crypto Plaza, we have been involved in this community from the very beginning. However, if we look at the market price, it has been extraordinarily far from market prices. This makes it practically unfeasible to have leveraged short and long positions. Creating new markets is one of the best marketing tools; many of us have opened accounts with other brokers precisely for this reason. I believe incentives should be aimed at boosting the launch of these markets with the necessary liquidity. Those five million dollars, I think, would provide a lot of liquidity to these new markets. There should be new options to offer incentives that could open up growth avenues, given that the current incentive budget does not seem very effective in terms of growth
