

I have been trying to no avail to fully understand how the Liquidation Bonus is calculated for each asset. I understand they are related to the risk assessment that is completed and it should be a function of collateral advance rates and slippage. Hopefully, this can be the start of a discussion as to how the liquidation bonus should be determined and factors for it to change for particular assets moving forward.