

I have been researching on iceberg orders in Twamm for a month. I had an idea about what if we hide the iceberg order details using zero-knowledge so that no user would be able to use that data for market manipulation just like how binance does it but without going for off-chain solutions.

I just wanna know if this is a feasible model for hiding large trade transaction data.