

Regarding proposals that have been Returned for Reconstruction, the Foundation would like to clarify for the community that these “Returns” may also be revoked upon further review. This would have the effect of reverting a proposal tagged “Return for Reconstruction” back to its previous “AIP Draft” status, eliminating the need for those authors to completely re-submit proposals as an AIP Idea for a second time.

We believe this clarification will help the community to better understand certain mechanics of the existing AIP process, and would enable some authors to have their proposals put up for vote in a more timely, expeditious fashion.

Clarifying further, authors also retain the right to resubmit a proposal that has been Returned for Reconstruction, and may opt to forego the seven-day community feedback period if they so choose.