

UPDATE: NEW ISSUE

Last night I was in a positive position and executed a close order twice and I thought it closed however it failed and then a violent price change began. So instead of making profit it wouldn't close the position until it hit the liquidation price! I found this to be unfair since I tried several times to close the position. I even tried before the violent price swing. It didn't cost me 30,000 dollars but it did cost me to lose money instead of make it and prevented me from stopping it!

The trades show me placing the order and then it says order cancelled. Upon looking at the cancelled trade on arbiscan it said " although one or more Error Occurred [execution reverted ] Contract Execution Completed. But it wasn't completed??
