Hello @chaoslabs,

I've been trading on the DYDX platform for about a month and a half now, and I'm quite impressed with the incentives for traders. I believe they play a crucial role in attracting new traders and ensuring the platform's sustainable growth. However, I'd like to offer some suggestions on how the incentives could be structured more effectively based on my experience trading on multiple platforms:

1. Revamping Rewards Distribution

:

- Instead of distributing rewards proportionally, I propose introducing raffles or mystery boxes based on a tiered approach.
- These tiers could be determined by trading volumes observed in previous seasons, encouraging traders to aim for higher tiers.
- Traders could earn raffles or mystery boxes for both weekly and cumulative season trading volumes.
- Incorporating a mystery element could add excitement and the potential for higher rewards based on luck, while maintaining the overall reward allocation.
- · Enhancing Trading Leagues

.

- Currently, I believe the design of trading leagues may discourage trading, especially in lower-tier leagues, when traders have already achieved substantial profits and secured top positions.
- To address this, I suggest introducing a minimum level of trading activity based on volume or the minimum number of days a trader needs to actively trade during the season.
- This approach would complement the existing profitability metrics, encouraging consistent trading engagement throughout the season.

I hope these suggestions are helpful in optimizing the trading experience and fostering greater participation on the DYDX platform.