I would say that any bonuses explicitly tied to model performance (stability, mmc, etc) could be tied to your stake (but not necessarily, we could have fixed "prizes" for things also), but a community bonus (or bug bounties) should not be tied to your stake value (although maybe just being staked period could be a qualifier). Any community benefit derived from [whatever is being rewarded] is going to be the same whether it came from a whale or a lowly peasant like me. Not absolutely everything has to have "the rich get richer" dynamic, and also that incentivizes the team NOT to reward good things that do come from whales because they would cost a lot more. (A regularized bureaucratized community bonus is also the least likely idea to be adopted because it is so subjective.)