USDC on Arbitrum One

Arbitrum One supports two different types of USDC:

- 1. Arbitrum-native USDC (USDC)
- 2. : USDC tokens native to the Arbitrum One chain.
- 3. Bridged USDC (USDC.e)
- 4. : Ethereum-native USDC tokens that have been bridged to Arbitrum One.

Differences between USDC and USDC.e

Historical context

Arbitrum One has supported Bridged USDC since conception, with over a billion Bridged USDC currently in circulation. On June 8th 2023, Circle added support for the Cross-Chain Transfer Protocol and launched Arbitrum-native USDC, which enables direct minting and burning of Arbitrum-Native USDC on Arbitrum One. Due to this, the Bridged USDC token symbol was renamed from USDC to USDC.e to accommodate Arbitrum-native USDC. Although most platforms have better support for Bridged USDC, the expectation is that this will change over time. At a later date, there will be incentives implemented to help facilitate the conversion of Bridged USDC to Arbitrum-native USDC.
