If a model is indeed low performing, the stake will burn. If it is weakly positive, it has some predictive power and may add to the diversity of the meta model.

Even if a model may seem weak, I believe the meta model does not use it directly, but rather builds a model on top of all staked models to make better predictions.

Similar to how ensemble works, multiple weak models form a stronger model overall.