The current method used to schedule spaces and request the presence of DAO members has some significant flaws. I imagine there is a high demand for member participation, especially after recent developments like moonshots and other events that everyone wants to engage with. Consequently, communication becomes congested, and Twitter/X is not ideal for organizing this. My proposal is to migrate from the current model to using a form or even a public calendar where everyone could see upcoming scheduled events and plan in advance. This would eliminate the need for the DAO to constantly search for messages on Twitter from people interested in organizing a space.

I welcome suggestions and opinions. If you believe this could become an AIP to enhance the community and the events organized by its members, please let me know.

(Also, I'd appreciate guidance on how to turn this into an AIP.)
