On Plasma, suppose someone creates a token contract as a separate chain. Suppose then that I am a merchant selling goods/services for that specific token. How many blocks should I wait before giving an user the purchased goods/services? I'm specifically wondering whether this can safely be done before the transaction is finalized on the underlying root chain.