Posted this on the Reddit page but thought I might get a better answer here:

Very interested in this project as I think the balance of privacy and compliance are the next big needed advance in crypto. Right now your choices are either Swiss Bank account or having your checkbook posted on the internet for all to see; there has to be a viable middle ground that matches how the real world generally works.

That said, I'm trying to understand who Secret's competitors are and how they are different. Litecoin, Tezos, and many others are implementing either Sapling or MimbleWimble, how will Secret still be different when they do?