This is an interesting idea but it seems that its effect is just shifting consensus earlier, as you're still forcing the attesters of the committee to agree to what builder won.

At that point, why do you even need a proposer? Just have builders propose blocks and attesters determine which one becomes canonical by a majority vote.