In some AIP drafts and ideas, we saw them include content such as, "if you vote yes, you will receive XXX (tokens or items) in return".

I would like to create an open discussion here. Should we allow these activities, or do we need to set a rule of prohibition?

From my understanding, this is a bribery activity. In many Proof-of-Stake public blockchains, bribing is allowed to incentive voting/staking activities. But I doubt if it is also a positive way in DAO governance. Someone may create a proposal asking for 1M $APE and say, I will distribute all $APE to owners who vote a "yes". From a financial perspective, owners have no reason to decline it.

Also, I am not very clear about that if we want to set a rule like this, what process we should go through. Do we need to create an AIP for it or it can be done via other processes? I'd love to hear your advice.
