At the anoma hacker house, we have played with the tooling and – even though there are some obvious smaller imperfections – this gives hands-on compositional modeling of high-level operational models, which can be used for model checking (in principle

, thinking long term) and test case generation (indispensable for mid term success). This will become a concern after we have completed the operational specs on the English level.