Enigma is working on something called secret contracts. Data that can be kept private privacy yet run on the open blockchain. I'm doing my best at estimating exactly how it works, but i know that part of this privacy technique involves splitting the data between different nodes. Not all nodes carry the same data.

I was wondering if a scaling solution could amplify this sharding security.

Am I wrong?