They were never used as part of your score or any visible stat, or trading by the fund, or anything that directly had an effect. They were used to generate internal backtest estimates of how out-of-sample (i.e. live) performance would hold up (since it is data you don't have the targets for). But it is shortly to be discontinued (in March 2022) altogether – we are going to get those targets – and you won't have to submit test predictions at all any more. So at this point…I'd say don't worry about it.