Hi there fam,

i was scrolling through the treasury wallets, i have noticed that they are all EOA accounts, which represent a single point of failure. So i believe that it's best if the funds are held in a multisig instead, it would also help for users to inspect treasury activity for ease of transparency, and also allow more flexibility in terms of allowing a delay period of time for a transaction to take place, to reduce any possible risks.