Hey.

I've been trying to figure out why it's necessary to have a block per deposit in Plasma Cash. None of the documentation explains why

. Only says it makes it cheap/faster to exit, but not sure why.

If deposit transactions are included amongst other transactions, then if you are verifying history as a client, then it should be sufficient to just specify the block number in a similar manner? Or am I missing something?