Hey guys! Long time contributor here. BANANA BILL has brought in a fresh wave of interest to the ecosystem. It's something different. New allocations and the ability to negotiate terms with partners is going to have a considerable impact on the decentralized org. I expect BBill will be a winning move.

Reasonable grant and partnership opportunities are tough to negotiate in a forum thread!

Banana Bill is a big earmarking of funds to be deployed to favorably power cool sh*t.

More exciting(to me) is what was funded in the recent Governance Working Group proposal. What they've been working on since ~December is the APE_U Initiative. They partnered with a kickass startup-advisor-type firm and have put together a program to powerup our serious AIP writers.

It's significant and worth mentioning here. What you'll see is an author fellowship form and short professional workshops and more. I think there are frequent contributors here who should look closer at the program and consider how they can get involved. Room for about 10-15 people.

I think they're recruiting based on referral or expressed interest at this time but may have a form around…Just had our first meet yesterday. I'm confident that it'll produce the best ecosystem and governance proposals that you've ever seen. Makes a nerdy ape like me lean forward.

If you're into writing proposals and community initiatives…follow or join in on what GWG & APE_U are doing with their coaches program and resource bank. Again, it has great potential and is worth posting about. Cumulative results of a lot of builders in the ecosystem is going to come together.

Banana Bill mainly presents opportunities for infastructure builders, native coders as well as builders from the outside the ecosystem, and will pour the foundation for a chain to support innovations built by Great Apes, Mocas, Horizen Jedis, and partners old-and-new. Huge opportunity for a lot of people.

Most profitable thing one could do right now is start a lab and build. Build-to-earn.

APE_U has just started its AIP author coaching cohort. More interesting to me than 3am solidity coding seshes are community initiatives, ecosystem and process proposals, and DAO planning. Network growth and community outreach is fun and fulfilling. We need great proposals writers!!!

I think for gov nerds, APE_U is where you wanna be. Many on this forum would be a good fit.

Check out their program…it was baked into the last GWG budget proposal. Worth looking at. I dont post as frequently here as used to but…again…this program made me lean forward when I read the details. APE_U is launching at a perfect time and will have a lasting impact just like BBill can.
